NOTES TO THE CONDUCTOR

This gentle and beautifully melodic selection is the perfect way for your students to develop a sensitive, legato playing style. Suggesting the cool mountain air of an evening in Spain, this intermezzo opens Act II of Bizet's operatic masterpiece with a lyrical flute solo that is eventually taken up by the entire orchestra. Mature-sounding and faithful to the composer's original, the colorful orchestration is sure to keep all sections interested. The piano accompaniment part can be played by harp (as in the original version) or a keyboard with harp setting.

When it first opened in 1873, Bizet's final opera “Carmen” was considered quite scandalous, and the initial performances had to be toned down to meet the moral standards of the day. Reaction to the music itself was mixed—some listeners were dismayed by the fact that Bizet's score included some spoken dialogue (unusual for the time), while others objected to the excess of “Spanishry” in a French opera. This negative reaction deeply affected Bizet, and when he died at the age of 36, just after the work's 33rd performance, he was a broken man, bitter at the rejection of his work. He never lived to see it become what is arguably the most popular opera ever composed.

Please note: Our band and orchestra music is now being collated by an automatic high-speed system. The enclosed parts are now sorted by page count, rather than score order.
