The Merry Farmer

from Album for the Young

Although Robert Schumann's first loves were music and literature he began his career studying law. He soon abandoned this however, and took private music lessons while beginning to compose. He wrote a great deal of music for the piano, including many collections of short pieces such as Album for the Young, from which this is taken.

Cradle Song

Wiegenlied

Johannes Brahms's father was a double bass player, and gave his son his first music lessons. As a young man Brahms made his living by playing the piano in pubs and rowdy drinking places. Although he was a composer of the Romantic period, Brahms liked the music of the Classical period, and Beethoven was his favourite composer.

Sleeping Beauty Waltz

Some of Tchaikovsky's best-known music, including this piece, is for the ballet. As a composer he was known for his clever and unusual orchestration, and in his popular 1812 Overture (which celebrates a Russian military victory) he uses a canon and peals of church bells!
